The inclusive park is ...

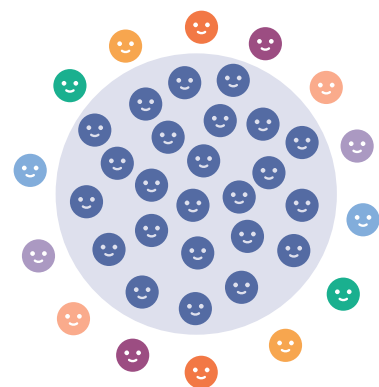

Inclusive play spaces offer the opportunity to play all together. They are accessible, involve children of all ages, abilities and encourage them to interact with each other. Inclusive play spaces allow children to connect with others in a positive way, relieve feelings of stress, stimulate creative thinking and exploration, increase confidence and allow them to enjoy the pleasure and benefits of play.

An inclusive playgrounds aims to create fun and challenging play opportunities for all children.

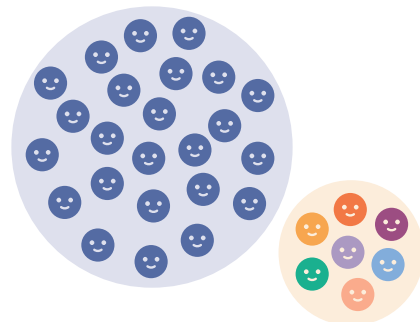

The inclusive play spaces guarantee:

- accessibility around and within the game
- opportunity to actively engage in the game in their own way
- Plenty of variations and choices to deliver high game value

It is not possible for all children to access everything in the play area in the same way, but inclusive play spaces are nevertheless places where children with or without disabilities can play together.

Inclusiveness and project ...

What does inclusiveness look like during a project?
 This sketch shows an example of an inclusive play space with opportunities and support functions for all ages and abilities, and the complementary elements for a complete inclusive environment.

There is a variety of experience in the games:

F Physical
S Sensory
S Social
E Educational

A young boy with short brown hair, wearing a blue and grey striped long-sleeved shirt and blue jeans, is smiling and leaning over a yellow sandpit. He has his hands outstretched towards the sand. The sandpit is part of a larger wooden playground structure with red panels. In the background, there are more wooden structures and green foliage.

Multi-game structures

Children start playing together at the age of 2-3. Easy access ensures, encourages and promotes play together for all.

We combine the equipment of the gym with the benefits of outdoor sports.
